

The first thing I saw when I stepped out of the train was a sea of people, all looking at me with
 curiosity and interest.
 I felt a little shy at first, but as I walked through the crowd, I realized that they were
 just ordinary people, just like me. I saw
 children playing, old
 men sitting on benches,
 and young couples
 holding hands. It was a wonderful sight, and I felt a sense of belonging. I had found a new home, and I
 was so happy.
