

The first part of the text is written in a highly decorative cursive hand, featuring large, sweeping loops and flourishes. The ink is dark and the paper shows signs of age with some staining and a dark spot at the top center.

On
 any

The second section of text continues the decorative cursive style. It includes several lines of text with prominent initial letters and complex interlacing of strokes. The overall appearance is that of a formal or ceremonial document.

nentio

This section of text is characterized by very tight and intricate cursive handwriting. The letters are closely spaced and the lines are more compressed than in the previous sections.

an
 an

The third section of text shows a continuation of the dense cursive script. The text is highly stylized and difficult to read without knowledge of the specific dialect or code used.

an polletino

The final section of text on the page features large, bold initial letters and concludes with a decorative flourish. The handwriting remains consistent with the rest of the document.

