

Handwritten text at the top of the page, including the word "Cassia" written in a large, bold script.

Several lines of faded handwritten text, likely describing botanical or medicinal properties.

More lines of faded handwritten text, continuing the descriptive or historical notes.

Handwritten text in the middle section, possibly detailing a specific specimen or its use.

Additional lines of faded handwritten text, showing the continuation of the entry.

Final lines of handwritten text at the bottom of the page, including some concluding remarks or a signature.

