

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a legal or administrative document. The text is dense and covers most of the page. It appears to be a record of a council or a set of regulations, mentioning various officials and locations. The script is highly stylized and characteristic of the late 15th or early 16th century.

Handwritten marginal notes on the left side of the page. The word "Haza" is clearly visible, followed by "comproy" and other illegible characters. These notes seem to provide additional context or commentary on the main text.

Second block of handwritten text, continuing the narrative or legal record. It follows the same cursive style as the first block. The text is organized into several lines, with some words appearing to be in a different script or dialect, possibly indicating a specific region or community. The document concludes with a signature or official seal area.
