

The image shows a single page from an old manuscript. The text is written in a very dense, dark, cursive script, likely from the Middle Ages. The ink is dark, possibly iron gall, and the parchment is a light brown color. There are several large, irregular white patches on the page, which appear to be areas where the parchment has been torn or where the ink has been washed away. These patches are most prominent in the center and lower right. The handwriting is very close together, with many loops and flourishes. Some words are written in a larger, bolder script, possibly indicating headings or important words. The overall appearance is that of a well-used but heavily damaged historical document.

as adunat
de pnylla

part 3
and