

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a legal or administrative document. The text is dense and difficult to decipher due to the cursive style and some fading. It appears to be a single paragraph or a section of a larger document.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, continuing from the previous block. This section also contains dense, cursive handwriting, possibly representing a different part of the same document or a separate entry. The text is highly stylized and characteristic of late medieval or early modern manuscript writing.

