

44

The first of these is the fact that the world is not a uniform whole, but is divided into many different parts and regions, each of which has its own peculiar characteristics and qualities. This is the result of the various causes which have acted upon the earth since its creation, and the result of the various causes which have acted upon the earth since its creation, and the result of the various causes which have acted upon the earth since its creation, and the result of the various causes which have acted upon the earth since its creation, and the result of the

 various causes which have acted
 upon the earth since its creation,

