

The first part of the manuscript is a list of names and titles, written in a cursive hand. The text is arranged in several columns, with some lines indented. The names appear to be of various ranks, possibly military or administrative, given the use of terms like "Colonel" and "Major". The handwriting is dense and somewhat difficult to decipher due to the cursive style and the age of the document.

In the lower half of the page, there is a large, ornate initial or decorative element. It features a central square or diamond shape with intricate patterns inside, surrounded by flowing, calligraphic flourishes that extend across the page. This decorative element is likely a section marker or a decorative initial for a new section of text.

The bottom of the page shows the beginning of a new section, with a large, stylized letter 'H' or similar character. The text continues in the same cursive hand, though it is partially obscured by the damage to the paper.