

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or letter. The text is written in dark ink on aged, yellowish paper. The top line is the most legible, appearing to read "De me quatuordecim...". Below it, there are several lines of text, some of which are crossed out with a horizontal line. The handwriting is dense and somewhat difficult to decipher due to its cursive style and the age of the document.

The lower portion of the page contains very faint, illegible handwritten text. It appears to be a continuation of the document or a separate set of notes. The ink is significantly faded, and the paper shows signs of wear, including smudges and discoloration. There are some faint markings and lines that suggest a structured layout, but the content is not readable.

