

demer... [The page contains several lines of handwritten text in an archaic script, likely a cursive or shorthand used in a historical manuscript. The text is densely packed and spans the width of the page. Some legible fragments include words like 'demer', 'que', 'para', and 'quia' in the lower half. There are some faint markings and possibly small annotations in the right margin.]

que sequantur
per eorum quosdam
doloseo puerum
para lode la acc
quia de la acc
mina

