

Handwritten text in a medieval script, possibly Latin or a Romance language, written on aged parchment. The text is arranged in approximately 20 horizontal lines. A large, irregular white tear runs vertically down the center of the page, obscuring the text in several lines. The script is dense and cursive, with some words appearing to be abbreviations or specific terms. The parchment shows signs of age, including discoloration and some staining.

Vertical text on the right margin, likely a list of numbers or a sequence of characters. The characters are small and appear to be a mix of letters and numbers, possibly representing a page numbering system or a specific code. The text is written in a similar hand to the main body of the page.

Small marginal notes or corrections on the left side of the page, written in the same script as the main text. These notes are positioned between the lines of the main text and appear to be supplementary information or corrections.

