

in his time, and yet long remained. In 1510, he was sent to the court of King Ferdinand, and was received with great honour. He was appointed to the office of Master of the Mint, and was made a knight of the Order of the Golden Fleece.
He died at Burgos in 1524, aged about 60 years.

He was a man of great learning, and wrote several works on various subjects. His most famous work is a history of the reign of King Ferdinand, which was highly esteemed by his contemporaries. He also wrote a treatise on the art of fortification, which was published posthumously. He was a man of great integrity, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was a man of great learning, and wrote several works on various subjects. His most famous work is a history of the reign of King Ferdinand, which
was highly esteemed by his contemporaries. He
also wrote a treatise on the art of fortification,
which was published posthumously. He was
a man of great integrity, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

Signature

