

Faint, illegible handwritten text in a historical script, possibly representing a legal or administrative document. The text is heavily faded and obscured by numerous stains and holes in the aged paper.

Faint, illegible handwritten text, likely a signature or a concluding phrase of the document. The handwriting is very light and difficult to discern against the background of the aged paper.