

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a legal or administrative document. The text is written in a dark ink on aged paper. It appears to be a collection of entries or a list, possibly related to land, taxes, or legal proceedings. The handwriting is dense and somewhat difficult to decipher due to its cursive nature and the age of the document. The text is arranged in several columns, with some lines being more prominent than others. There are some markings and symbols at the top of the page, possibly indicating a page number or a specific section. The overall appearance is that of a historical manuscript or a set of records.

Handwritten notes or signatures in the right margin, written in a similar cursive script. These notes appear to be additional information or a signature related to the main text. The handwriting is less dense than the main text, and there are some spaces between the lines. The notes are written in a way that suggests they are a separate but related entry or a comment on the main document.

