

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a letter or document, written on aged, yellowed paper. The text is mirrored across the page, suggesting it was written on the reverse side and bled through. The ink is dark and the handwriting is fluid and characteristic of the 17th or 18th century.

Handwritten signature or name, possibly "Johann Baptist" or similar, written in a cursive script. The text is partially obscured by a white mark and is mirrored across the page.

