

Faint, illegible handwriting in a cursive script, likely from the 17th or 18th century. The text is mostly obscured by fading and bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.

London the 10th of June 1666

Further faint, illegible handwriting in a cursive script, continuing the text from the top of the page. The ink is very light, making the words difficult to discern.

