

The first part of the manuscript is written in a cursive hand, with several lines of text visible on the left side. The text is heavily obscured by large, irregular holes and tears in the parchment, particularly in the center and right-hand portions of the page. The remaining legible fragments of text are scattered throughout the page, often appearing as isolated words or short phrases.

Some of the more prominent fragments include:

- On the left side, near the top: "The first part of the manuscript..."
- On the right side, in the middle: "The second part of the manuscript..."
- At the bottom of the page, a large, stylized signature or name is visible, possibly reading "The first part of the manuscript..."

The overall condition of the manuscript is poor, with significant damage to the original text. The parchment is aged and discolored, and the large holes suggest it may have been subjected to insect damage or physical wear over time.

