

Yuntam.

The first part of the page contains several lines of dense, handwritten text in a cursive script. The ink is dark, and the handwriting is somewhat slanted. There are some larger, more decorative initials or flourishes interspersed among the lines.

A vertical column of text on the left side of the page, possibly serving as a list or index. The words are written in a similar cursive hand but are more compact and less connected than the main body of text.

The middle section of the page continues the main body of handwritten text. It features several lines of script with varying degrees of slant and spacing. There are some larger, more decorative initials or flourishes interspersed among the lines.

The bottom section of the page contains a final block of handwritten text. This section appears to be a summary or a concluding part of the document, with some lines being more prominent than others.

