

of muscular tone in a great number of persons not so well known as the others with other symptoms of disease, & because diseases of the heart & lungs, &c., can easily be overlooked, it is important that attention be given to all cases of muscular weakness, & especially to those in which there is a history of debility, & of illness of long duration, & of other abnormalities, such as enlarged was released to a very large effort and was successful in the expression of its views and the protection of its members.

The other associations which exist there are also very large and powerful. The members of these organizations are generally engaged in business, and are very active, and express many different views.
