

The first part of the paper is devoted to a general consideration of the question of the relation of the mind to the body. It is shown that the mind is not a substance, but a series of states or events, and that these states or events are caused by the body.
 The second part of the paper is devoted to a consideration of the question of the relation of the mind to the soul. It is shown that the soul is not a substance, but a
 states or events are caused by the mind.

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some minor discoloration and faint, illegible markings or stains, particularly along the left edge and center. There are no text or illustrations on this page.
