

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a list or account, with several lines of text. The text is faint and difficult to decipher, but appears to be organized in a structured manner, possibly with columns or headings. The script is characteristic of the late 15th or early 16th century.

