The first section of the manuscript contains several lines of text written in a highly decorative, cursive Gothic script. The text is arranged in approximately six lines, with some words appearing to be underlined or written in a slightly larger hand. The ink is dark brown, and the paper shows signs of age and wear, particularly along the left edge.

The lower portion of the page is dominated by very faint, almost illegible handwriting. This text appears to be a continuation of the manuscript's content but is significantly less distinct than the upper section. There are some larger, more prominent characters or symbols scattered throughout this area, but they do not form a readable sequence of words. The overall appearance is that of a heavily used or perhaps overwritten page.
