

Handwritten text in a medieval script, likely a charter or legal document. The text is densely packed and spans most of the page. It contains names of individuals and places, such as 'Habela', 'Galeyl de ven', and 'Jordan'. The script is a form of Gothic or similar medieval cursive. There are some ink blots and irregularities in the writing, characteristic of historical manuscripts. The text appears to be a record of land grants, agreements, or legal proceedings involving several parties.
