

The first part of the manuscript is written in a cursive hand, likely a late Gothic or early modern script. The text is densely packed and covers the upper two-thirds of the page. It appears to be a historical or legal document, possibly a record of a court case or a formal agreement. The handwriting is somewhat difficult to decipher due to its cursive nature and the age of the document.

The lower third of the page contains a second block of text, also written in the same cursive hand. This section is partially obscured by a large, irregular tear on the left side of the page. The text continues in a similar style to the upper section, suggesting it is part of the same document. The overall condition of the manuscript is poor, with significant damage to the paper and some fading of the ink.

