

Handwritten text at the top of the page, including a date-like phrase: "14 de octubre de 1610" and the name "Juan de Velasco".

[The following text is written in a highly stylized, cursive script, likely Spanish or Portuguese, and is largely illegible due to fading and bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

The visible fragments of text appear to be a formal document or report, possibly a royal decree or a military report, given the context of the date and the name mentioned at the top.

