

Manuscript text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or letter. The text is densely packed and spans most of the page. It begins with a large initial 'M' and contains several lines of text, some of which are crossed out or heavily scribbled over. The script is characteristic of the late 15th or early 16th century.

A circular stamp or seal impression, possibly containing a signature or official mark, located in the lower right quadrant of the page.
