Contrafactual history of the English reformation in which the author argues that if the English had not been converted to Protestantism, they would have been ruled by a monarch who was a Catholic.
The author also discusses the religious and political changes that occurred during the English Reformation, including the dissolution of the monasteries and the establishment of the Church of England.
The author concludes that if the English had not been converted to Protestantism, they would have been ruled by a monarch who was a Catholic.
