

111

✓

The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes the need for transparency and accountability in financial matters, particularly in the context of public administration. The text is written in a formal, cursive style typical of the 18th or 19th century.

The second part of the document details the specific procedures for auditing and reporting. It outlines the responsibilities of various officials and the steps to be followed in the event of a discrepancy or irregularity. The language is precise and legalistic, reflecting the formal nature of the subject matter.

The final section of the document concludes with a reaffirmation of the principles of honesty and integrity. It serves as a reminder of the high standards expected of those in positions of trust and authority. The overall tone is one of seriousness and professionalism.

Comptroller

4

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal, at the City of New York, this 15th day of June, 1795.

[Signature]

[Signature]

The undersigned, being duly sworn, depose and say that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the original as the same appears from the records of the office of the Comptroller of the City of New York.

[Signature]

