

Handwritten text in a historical Spanish script, likely Castilian or a related dialect from the early modern period. The text is arranged in approximately 18 lines, with significant spacing and some corrections. The script is highly cursive and difficult to transcribe precisely. The content appears to be a legal or administrative document, possibly a list of names, titles, or a record of transactions. Key elements include: 'palacio de los duques de...', 'calle de...', and '...'. The text is written on aged, yellowed paper with some ink bleed-through and corrections.