

Handwritten text at the top of the page, possibly a title or header, written in a cursive script.

Handwritten title or heading in a large, decorative cursive script.

The main body of the page contains several lines of handwritten text in a cursive script. The text is oriented vertically but appears to be written horizontally, possibly due to the page's orientation or the writer's style. The ink is dark and the handwriting is fluid. There are some red markings or corrections interspersed within the text.

