

The first part of this book is a collection of letters from the King of Castile to the King of Aragon, written in the year 1462. The letters are in Spanish and discuss the political situation of the time, including the marriage of Isabella and Ferdinand and the unification of the crowns. The text is written in a cursive hand and is somewhat faded in places.

This section contains several large, decorative initials and signatures, likely belonging to the King or other high-ranking officials. The initials are written in a highly stylized, calligraphic script. The text accompanying these initials is also in Spanish and appears to be a continuation of the letters or a separate document.

The initials include:

- F (likely for Ferdinand)
- I (likely for Isabella)
- R (likely for Reyes)
- S (likely for Señores)
- V (likely for Vuestros)

The text below the initials includes phrases such as "Yo el Rey" and "Yo la Reyna", indicating the royal authority of the signatories.
