

YOUNG MAN'S VOYAGE

CHAPTER I
The young man's first voyage to the West Indies in the year 1750. He sailed from London on the 1st of January, and arrived at St. Domingo on the 15th of February.
He was accompanied by his father and mother, and a few friends. They were received with great hospitality by the Governor, and were lodged in the best houses of the city. The young man was very much pleased with the country, and the people. He saw many fine buildings, and a great number of ships in the harbor. He was very much surprised to see so many negroes, and to see them so well treated. He saw many of them employed in the plantations, and others in the city. He was very much pleased to see them so well treated, and to see them so well employed. He saw many of them employed in the plantations, and
others in the city. He was very
much pleased to see them so well
treated, and to see them so well employed.

CHAPTER II
The young man's second voyage to the West Indies in the year 1751. He sailed from London on the 1st of January, and arrived at St. Domingo on the 15th of February. He was accompanied by his father and mother, and a few friends. They were received with great hospitality by the Governor, and were lodged in the best houses of the city. The young man was very much pleased with the country, and the people. He saw many fine buildings, and a great number of ships in the harbor. He was very much surprised to see so many negroes, and to see them so well treated. He saw many of them employed in the plantations, and others in the city. He was very much pleased to see them so well
treated, and to see them so well
employed.

