

Handwritten text in a narrow column on the left side of the page, likely bleed-through from the reverse side. The text is written in a cursive script and is mostly illegible due to fading and the angle of the page.

Main body of handwritten text in a cursive script, occupying the right two-thirds of the page. The text is dense and appears to be a letter or a formal document. It contains several lines of text, some of which are more legible than others. There is a large, decorative flourish or signature in the lower right quadrant of this section.

no seven doise:

Coaxat
A large, decorative flourish or signature, possibly a stylized name or a mark, located at the bottom right of the page.

